

Migration Paragraph

People sometimes migrate to escape other people. Sometimes, invaders arrive: Mongols on horseback invaded Europe; Vikings in boats invaded England; Europeans forced First Nations people onto reservations in Canada. Sometimes, people try to escape slavery: African-American slaves secretly fled to Canada until the mid-1900s. Sometimes, war breaks out: World War I and II in Europe; the conflict in Vietnam and conscription in the U.S.A. Sometimes, people are persecuted: the Muslims left India for Pakistan and the Hindus moved to India; southern Sudanese left their villages for refugee camps; and still today, many Sikhs leave India and move to Canada. People are forced to move for all sorts of social reasons.
